

For this month's Sophomore Spotlight, we are highlighting Kyle Davis, a senior Electrical Engineering student from Breaux Bridge, LA; and his mentee Braylon Gregory, a Sophomore Civil Engineering student also from Breaux Bridge, LA

Davis stated that he was heavily influenced to attend Southern University by his sister who had perviously attended. Coming from Breaux Bridge, Davis was not knowledgeable about HBCUs and everything they entail.

Similarly, Braylon stated that he also attended Southern University because of his older sister who attended a PWI and then transferred to Southern her sophomore year.

Davis explained that he became a mentor because he wanted to use the trials and tribulations he went through as a freshman to help other students with their transition from high school to college. Davis learned during his tenure at Southern University, that students were not getting the information they needed to be successful in college because their parents did not attend college. From Davis, Gregory learned various life skills like how to properly wear a suit and about how to give a proper introduction.

Gregory advises other students seeking a mentor to listen to their mentor and ask questions if need be. He states that the mentors are very knowledgeable and are there to assist in any way possible.
